

Part 1: Introduction

Since 1894 FamilySearch and its predecessors have gathered and preserved records from around the globe, creating the largest collection of genealogical and historical records in the world.

FamilySearch.org is a top-rated free website hosted by FamilySearch International; designed to help researchers collaborate in finding their ancestors. We are building one tree containing the stories, photos, facts, dates and sources to link us all together as one family.

On FamilySearch.org there are two main places to search for details about your family:

- 1) Family Tree – explore Family Tree to discover what has already been added about your ancestors. This includes names, dates, photos, stories, documents and any sources that have been added to verify information.
- 2) FamilySearch – Search allows you to examine historical records for details about your ancestors. These resources include official church (for example: birth, marriage, death) and governmental (for example: census) records that can help fill in gaps in your family story.

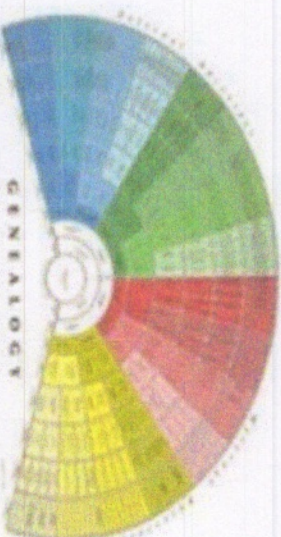

How many Cousins do I have ?

Let's just use 7 generations. For rough figures... let's say they had only four children and each of those had four children, etc. What numbers are we talking about?

Here are the numbers for just seven generations of descendants.

Generations – Starting on the outside generation

1. So 10 for that generation (2 parents and 4 children and spouses).
 2. Then those 4 children would have 4 children = 16 + spouses = 32
 3. Those 16 would have 4 children = 64 + spouses = 128
 4. Those 64 would have 4 children = 256 + spouses = 512
 5. Those 256 would have 4 children = 1,024 + spouses = 2,048
 6. Those 1,024 would have 4 children = 4,096 + spouses = 8,192
 7. Those 4,096 would have 4 children = 16,384 + spouses = 32,768
- Add all those up for a total of 43,690 or nearly 44 thousand people from one of the 128 couples. That is for just 7 generations. 128 couples X 43,690 = 5 1/2 million total.

5 1/2 million cousins to find! Only about 25 thousand have been found.

(25,000/5,500,000) = 4 tenths of 1% have been found

The Dash that is our Whole History

The gravestones of any cemetery in the world contain a name, birth date, a dash, and then a death date

“That little dash between the birth and death date seems so small and insignificant, but our whole history lies within it,”

Bradley D. Foster
